

JakeSake Foundation Finds Great Support

BY: JONATHAN CRANE

Each month Tualatin Life features articles that promote community members who need support in one form or another. Two months ago our story about cancer patient Jennifer Vranizan generated a great deal of response and many of our readers sent very generous donations. Last month we featured a story about Jake Dering and the JakeSake Foundation.

Within just a day or so, the owners of Islands Tanning asked for the article so they could make posters for their stores and took it upon themselves to spearhead a collection effort to support the JakeSake cause. They posted the article on their very popular facebook page and the called out to their friends for support. Within just a few days the donations began to pour in. Additionally, as they do for their annual Doernbecher Children's Hospital fundraiser, the Islands Tanning owners will match all donations dollar for dollar.

Tualatin Islands Tanning store manager Tylor Peck offers customers a chance to donate to JakeSake Foundation

Each of the 10 area Islands Tanning locations has a prominent JakeSake display on the front counter, with little donations cards to be filled out along with donations which they post on the window to encourage others to do the same.

The JakeSake Foundation's facebook page exploded with more than 100 new "Likes" within a week after the article broke and gaining the support of Islands Tanning facebook friends.

To make a contribution to the JakeSake Foundation, stop by any area Islands Tanning location before the end of October and your donation will be matched by Islands Tanning.

This is how locals help locals!
