

Tualatin Haunted House is Sure to Scare you Silly!

Thrills and chills are coming to Tualatin, as they do every year at Halloween. Tualatin residents are in for a fright if they dare to visit the Haunted House at the Van Raden Community Center, located inside Tualatin Community Park.

“This is a terrifying haunted house, created and operated by members of the Tualatin Youth Advisory Council (YAC),” says Julie Ludemann, recreation supervisor for the city. “This year’s theme is the Haunted School, and it will include a scarier than usual trip to the principal’s office.”

“The whole community is welcome, with the target audience being middle school and high school students. It might be a little scary for the younger kids, but all the actors are Tualatin high school students, and if they notice a young child getting too scared they are quick to tone things down,” Ms. Ludemann explains. The YAC serves as an advocacy group for Tualatin youth.

Come out to the Van Raden Community Center for the Tualatin Youth Advisory Council’s Haunted House. Created and run entirely by YAC members, this Haunted House is sure to scare you silly!
