

State of Oregon taps Healthy, Wealthy & Wise to create free health insurance enrollment center

Healthy, Wealthy & Wise is one of 35 Oregon insurance agencies that have received a grant from the Department of Consumer and Business Services, Oregon Health Insurance Marketplace to create a drop-in enrollment center during the upcoming health insurance open enrollment period from November 1, 2016 to January 31, 2017.

Being a drop-in center means that Healthy, Wealthy & Wise will provide free, one-to-one help for people shopping for and enrolling in health insurance. Agents help consumers review plan options and find the plan that is the best and most affordable fit for them. They can also help people access the financial assistance that is available to most Oregonians through HealthCare.gov. And they can provide help or partner referrals to people signing up for the Oregon Health Plan.

“Shopping for and enrolling in insurance can be difficult and confusing, but an agent can help you select the insurance that is the best fit for your family,” said DCBS Director Patrick Allen. “We are grateful that this network of qualified insurance agents across the state is providing that support.”

“I’ve lived in Tualatin for 25 years and have strong ties to our community. My kids have grown up here. There are not many convenient places for residents of Tualatin to get help signing up for health insurance. When help is not readily available, people don’t always have enough knowledge to make the best decisions. I help my clients choose health insurance that best fits their budgets and lifestyles. I applied for this grant to make sure that anyone in Tualatin and the communities close to it can find the help they need,” said Cydni Klauss with Healthy, Wealthy & Wise.
